art of farming. It has been estimated that if each ear of corn could be induced to yield one more kernel, each head of wheat one more grain, each hen lay one more egg a year, each cow give one pint more milk a day, each steer produce one more pound of beef, and so on through the category of farm products, it would suffice to produce a sum sufficient to afford every person who cared to take it, a thorough education in the art of farming.

When once so educated, the farmer can make the ear of corn produce dozens more of kernels, the hen lay several more eggs, the cow give quarts more of milk, etc.

It has been calculated by some that if all the cities of the United States were to join hands in the founding of enough schools of practical farming to afford a course for every farmer in the land, the decrease in the cost of living through the increase in production not only would pay for the establishment of the schools, but for their perpetual maintenance. Color is lent to this statement by what was once said by Andrew Carnegie concerning the price of wheat. He said there could be but one outcome of a war between the United States and Europe—the withholding of a small proportion of our grain supply would force the prices up to such an extent that the population of that continent would insist on peace, and the withholding of half of it would starve them into submission.

Increased Production. While it is the hope of the consuming masses in the cities that increased production may decrease the cost of living, they assert that the farmer will be no poorer in the end. They calculate that he will find a higher net profit in raising 40 bushels of wheat to the acre at 70 cents a bushel than he now enjoys while raising 15 bushels at $1.40.

JEFFRIES HAS THAT PUNCH THAT WINS

San Francisco, April 7.—The punch is what will win, according to Sam Fitzpatrick, former manager of Jack Johnson. And for that reason Sam seems to be a Jeffries man. He says: "I am not underestimating Johnson's gameness, nor am I failing to take into account his ability as a clever, fast fighter of the heavyweight division, but when I say that Johnson cannot win over Jeffries, I mean it. Jack Johnson has not the punch that will put Jeffries to sleep, and that is the whole story. He would not knock Jeffries off his feet if they fought 100 rounds. I know both the men, and particularly I know Johnson."
